About our Keynote Speakers

Captains Vic Ledbetter and Stacey Randolph are career Kalamazoo Department of Public Safety veterans who are committed to protecting, serving, networking and collaborating. They often team up to do presentations and speaking engagements for young people and adults on awareness of local laws and bridging the gap between law enforcement and the community.

Collectively, they have decades of experience in patrol, community policing, undercover investigations, criminal investigations, training, SWAT, and other facets of law enforcement.

They both have their Master's degrees in Criminal Justice Administration from Ferris State University and in Public Administration from Western Michigan University, respectively, and they have also received training from the FBI.

Capt. Ledbetter is the divisional commander of the Criminal Investigations Division, and Capt. Randolph is the divisional commander of the Service Division, as well as the lead recruiter for their department. They maintain that education is very important and that some opportunities in life are definitely about who you know, but also who knows you!
